

The Wellness Coalition

Troy University is offering a Community Health Worker Apprenticeship Program.

The Community Health Worker (CHW) Apprenticeship Program gives employers the unique opportunity to offer jobs in their community with the ultimate goal of providing knowledge and retention of those service workers in your community.

BECOME A COMMUNITY HEALTH WORKER EMPLOYER

BENEFITS OF BECOMING A REGISTERED APPRENTICESHIP EMPLOYER

- Federal studies show 91% of apprentices remain with the employer who is training them.
- You will have a direct impact on the community you serve.
- Apprenticeships can help you create workers with necessary skills for the job.
- Apprentices get direct experience with your company.
- Your company drives the work processes and standards apprentices must meet.
- Learning in your facility ensures employees are familiar with equipment and processes used in your setting.
- Shared benefit of employee growth and development into a career employee encourages positive culture and applications.
- The mentorship associated with an apprenticeship program connects veteran workers directly with the next generation, minimizing the continuity gap between seasoned employees and junior ones.
- Participating will give you tax credit benefits.

To learn more or become a CHW apprenticeship employer, contact the Alabama Office of Apprenticeship.

alapprentice.org/employers